KATHARINE TYNAN

WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED

"This is not so bad!" Mr. Langton said, with an air of relief. "I find the Chateau nifty, else I should not attribute nerves to you. Mrs. Lloyd is the same, yet she is a singularly courageous woman. She says all this coast is nifty, and puts it down to liver like the sensible woman she is."

Hilary did not see Mrs. Lloyd that night. She was dining with some friends who had a chalet in the village; and Hilary had gone over to the Chateau and to bed before she returned.

The bed was very comfortable; the sheets clean, though of somewhat coarse linen. There was a faint hint of mustiness in the air, but Hilary thought to what there must have been when the Chateau was opened in June for the reception of visitors. He felt, almost as soon as his head touched the pillow, into the sleep of fatigued youth and a perfect digestion.

Some time in the night he awoke with a strange sound in his ears. Someone was digging—close at hand, in the wood. Coming wide awake, he was aware that the sound had been going on for a long time—all through his sleep.

The window was as open as he could make it. The fire had died down, and the room was in darkness. He sat up in bed and felt a strong draught. The door must be open. He had fastened it securely before he went to bed.

He fumbled for the matches and found them. He struck one. It spurted up in a thin flame and went out before he had time to light the lamp; but he had seen by the momentary light that the door stood open.

At a second attempt he succeeded in lighting the lamp. He went and closed the door. It seemed to catch fast enough, but one could never be sure of those old locks. When he had made it fast he went back to the window. The digging was still going on; he could hear the impact of the spade with the earth. It was in the wood. Certainly it was in the wood.

He blew the lamp out. He was not going to yield to nerves. Tomorrow he would discover who had been digging. He had vague memories of hearing that a good deal of smuggling went on in this coast. The digging might be connected with something of the kind. Anyhow, he was not going to be frightened by such a thing. He would not be driven from the Chateau by such a trifle, even though the sound was depressing, like the digging of a grave. Presently youth and vigour triumphed. He slept an untroubled sleep, deep and sweet, like the sleep of a child.

CHAPTER XX.

The Inn of Meetings

The morning was bright and beautiful, a clear, somewhat cold autumnal light on everything. Hilary got up early; went down to the shore and bathed, before a blind was lifted on the great white front of the Splendide, which presently would be dull and dark for the winter months.

The Chateau was a very different place on a bright morning from what it had been in the falling light of an autumn evening. As he went down through the house along the paths between the thick undergrowth and the dense trees, he was inclined to smile at his alarms of the night before. That his door had stood open was nothing. Probably the bolt had only half shot when he had thought it secure. As for the digging, well, there was doubtless a perfectly harmless explanation.

He went to the Hotel de la Marine for breakfast, looking as clean and shining as sea bathing, exercise and good health could make him, and Madame, bustling in and out between the open kitchen and the salle a manger, bestowed approval on him, putting him down in her own mind as an Monsieur tres comme il faut. Madame was a judge of such matters, she would have said.

M. Dufour was nowhere to be seen; nor had Mr. Langton yet appeared. While Hilary waited for his breakfast a long, square-shouldered athletic-looking woman, accompanied by a little girl of about twelve, with a piquant, soft little face, came into the salle a manger from the interior of the house. She wore a business-like tailor made coat and skirt of grey homespun, and, although her features were plain and her complexion weather-beaten, there was something so clean and wholesome, so much of the open air about her, that Hilary was attracted by her at once. The little English girl, with her fair hair in a thick plait, and her soft, pretty profile was also pleasant to look upon.

Hilary at once introduced himself to the lady, who was, as he suspected, Mrs. Lloyd. Jean, the waiter, brought them coffee and rolls, and they began to talk over the meal, Hilary feeling that it was the easiest thing in the world to drop into intimacy with Mrs. Lloyd. He already knew that the lady was a great swimmer, and had saved many lives. He looked at her with interest. She was strongly built—somewhat too square and sturdy; obviously her muscles had developed at the expense of feminine roundness and grace. But to think of the things she had done! This was a man indeed! Hilary said to himself, with a glow of honest enthusiasm.

"She has a whole case of medals for swimming and life saving," Mr. Langton had reported, "and Hilary bids fair to rival her mother. She brought in a drowned man all on her own this summer and rendered first aid before a doctor could be found. He's alive and well today, and the village blesses Miss Kitty as she passes through it."

"You must come for a walk with us after breakfast," the lady said. "Mr. Langton will not be down till déjeuner, at noon. He does not sleep in the early hours of the night. I fancy. I have seen him look very tired."

Hilary accepted, well pleased. He liked Mrs. Lloyd and her daughter; and he had really nothing to do. He had left no address for letters to be forwarded. The post came while they sat over their coffee; and there were no letters for Mr. Langton, so that he, too, probably had arranged that letters were not to be forwarded. Mrs. Lloyd had a bundle of correspondence, and the Times of the day before, which she handed to Hilary. He opened it, glanced casually at the middle pages and laid it down again. He was not greatly interested in what was happening in England at the moment.

They went out into the village street together, and the ladies walked with him to the gates of the Chateau, where they waited. He wanted to fetch his pipe and walking stick.

The village street looked very foreign and picturesque, running down the hill to the sea at the end; the white cottages with their green outside shutters and outer doors of ironwork; the picturesque figures of old and young women, children, fishermen, and a solitary gendarme against the background of houses, quaintly irregular; the sky, which was certainly a little bluer than English skies; the gold of the sunshine, all blended to a whole which made Hilary feel that he was out of England. He found the change pleasant. Mrs. Lloyd interested him; the fawn-like grace and shyness of Kitty were good to look at.

"You have the Chateau to yourself," the elder lady said, as he joined them where they waited by the gates of the Chateau.

"So far as I can tell," Hilary returned gaily. "I certainly found my bedroom door open last night when I thought I had fastened it. And there was certainly a sound of someone digging in the wood, a sound which went on through my dreams and was there in my waking moments. What could anyone be digging in the wood for?"

"Ah, you heard that! It is a familiar sound to anyone who sleeps in the Chateau. I was wondering if you would ask about it. I wished to warn you not to speak of it to M. Dufour, or to Madame. No. Monsieur forgets all his good manners when anyone suggests that he or she has heard digging in the wood."

"Then others have heard it?"

"Oh, yes, everyone hears it. Several of Monsieur's clients have gone to the Splendide because of it. Hence Monsieur's touchiness. I hope you don't mind it?"

"Not I. I slept very comfortably last night despite the mysterious noise. Have you any theory about it?"

"None. I daresay there is some explanation if one could arrive at it. They are very superstitious here. Michel, who drives the bus, asserts that he has seen, going home late at night along a main carrying the white figure of a woman in his arms who passes in at the gate of the Chateau. Michel sees many things after he has had his fifth or sixth glass of absinthe."

"But, my dear," said his wife, after he had complained about the food the new cook had brought in, "you know during these terrible times it is absolutely necessary that we make great sacrifices."

"Oh, of course, but what I object to is that cook's making here in the form of a burnt offering."—Indiana News.

Have Value as Insect Destroyers

No Shooting of Prairie Chickens Permitted This Year

For the last few years prairie chickens have continually been decreasing in numbers, and the situation became so acute of late that it was decided to prohibit the shooting of that species of bird, which at one time was seen in large flocks on all parts of the prairie. The protection now extends from the present time until 1918, and if considered necessary the closed season will be extended for a further period at the next meeting of the legislature.

A variety of reasons have been given for the great scarcity of the prairie chicken, among them being the unfavorable weather conditions during hatching time in 1915 and the killing of female chickens by crows, hawks, wolves, gopher poison, excessive hunting, pump guns and even the rural telephone wires have been blamed for their partial destruction. Many remedies have been suggested the prohibition of the shooting of the birds for a number of years, increased penalties for violation of the game laws, regulation of the use of gopher poisons, prohibition of the use of small rifles, prohibition of hunting with dogs, reduction of the bag limit, and the extermination of crows and other enemies of the prairie chicken.

The economic value of the prairie chicken is too often overlooked. It is a scientific fact that all birds of the grouse family destroy myriads of most destructive insects which if left unchecked would play havoc with all kinds of crops. Birds of that species have been appropriately named the "most marvellous engine of destruction ever put together of flesh and blood."

The grouse and all birds belonging to that family live on a diet of weed seeds during the fall and winter when they cannot get their regular supply of insects. Every factor that tends to keep down the insect and weed pest is certainly deserving of more than passing interest, and on the score of their great usefulness, to the farmer the grouse are worthy of every protection.

A very exhaustive study of the causes of the scarcity of the prairie chicken has been made by the provincial game branch, and every possible measure has been taken to protect them and save them from utter destruction.

Ypres

In the salient of Ypres there are not less than one hundred thousand graves of Allied soldiers, sometimes marked by plain wooden crosses, sometimes obliterated by the debris of ruined trenches, sometimes hidden in corners of fields. The ground is forever England; it is also forever France. When the war is over this triangle of meadow land, with a ruin of city for its base, will be an enclave of British soil consecrated as the holy land of two peoples. It will be for us the most hallowed spot on earth, for it holds our bravest dust, and it is a proof and record of a new spirit.

"Why didn't Rastus marry that Coopath gal?"
"Oh, she done flunk at de las' minute—wouldn't lend him a dolah foh 'git de license wif."—Boston Transcript.

She Thought of Others

It was one of the days that smashed all weather bureau records. The thermometer and the humidity were fighting for first honors in making life unbearable.

A frail little woman sat on a bench in one of the city squares. The sun was fast piercing the only shady spot she had been able to find. The tiny baby in her arms, after fretting pitifully for two hours, had fallen asleep. Another baby, still toddling, was re-belling vociferously because her bottle of milk had turned sour. The boy of 3 had cut his finger on broken glass and used his blouse and trousers to quench the flow of blood.

But at last there came a lull, and turning to another tired mother close by, the little frail woman said:

"My . . . but it must be hard for the boys in the trenches."—New York Evening Sun.

Submarines Have Done Some Good

Baron Rhondia, the food controller in an interview with the London correspondent of Bundesblatt, declares the submarine campaign is no longer causing anxiety regarding England's bread supply.

"In one respect," remarked the controller, "the submarine campaign is a blessing. It has acted as a stimulus to cultivation so that within a year the United Kingdom will practically be independent of imports as far as the chief foodstuffs are concerned."

"Father," said the small boy, "what is Senatorial courtesy?"

"I am not exactly clear on that point, my son. But it seems to be some sort of arrangement that permits a Senator to be as inconsiderate as he chooses."—Washington Star.

The TRAIL BLAZER to greater Motor Car Value

From the standpoint of dollar for dollar value there's not a car made which offers more for your money than the famous Chevrolet Four-Ninety A.

Before the Chevrolet was made in Canada, good cars were all high in price.

But our mammoth production and manufacturing efficiency enables us to sell the Chevrolet Four-Ninety A at a price much lower than its value when compared with other makes of cars.

With the surplus power developed by the famous valve-in-head motor the owner of a Four-Ninety A invariably is the "trail blazer."

Standard equipment includes speedometer, electric starting and lighting, ammeter, oil indicator light equipment, one man top, demountable rims, non-skid tires on rear wheels and many features usually looked for in cars much higher in price.

The people of Maine, by a big majority, have turned down the vote for women. On this hemisphere, the sentiment for suffrage appears to be largely a matter of geography. As you come west it increases, as you go east it diminishes.

Time was, when the opening of a branch bank in any of our small towns or villages marked a new era in its history. Today it creates but a passing interest. Many of our largest and oldest banking institutions did their entire business thru a head office and a handful of branches. Now, not a day passes that does not witness the birth of one of these new financial agencies.

When our great transcontinental railways began their
"spee-up" process throughout the west, less than a decade ago, it was said that a new town appeared on the map
every day; and the banks followed closely in their wake.

In the Klondike boom, two of our oldest and most conservative banks rushed in and opened for business in a tent. No sooner had the steel been laid to Peace River than a brace of banks established themselves
there, and this despite the alleged financial stringency of wartime.

In these days of "quick action"
the wholesale houses of the East desire accurate and concise data as to the exact location of the vast network of branch banks throughout the West.

The head offices of the banks themselves - when contemplating new fields of conquest - require a well plotted survey of the vast Western territory, in order to avoid duplication and overlapping. To the small dealer of the West, the homesteader and the rancher, associated as many of them are with a particular bank in the East, the information as to where these institutions can be found, is a great convenience.

This information is furnished to the public in a new edition of the Bank and Railway Map issued by the Department of the Interior. In addition to the data with regard to the banks, an equally valuable feature is the color scheme indicating the location of the three great railway systems travers-ing the West. One is thus enabled at a glance, to determine which is the quickest and most direct route for transportation between any two given points.

A copy of this map may be obtained gratis upon application to the Superintendent of the Natural Resources Intelligence Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

Progress of Japan

Viscount Kato says a fundamental thing about the progress of Japan: "Many foreigners think that Japan half a century ago was an uncivilized country. Therefore, the progress which Japan has made may seem to these foreigners extraordinary. But Japan had a characteristic civilization of her own before the country was opened to the world. Therefore, in the Japanese view, the progress of Japan during the past fifty years is not remarkable. It is less than the progress made by some other countries during the same half-century. That is to say, the difference between Japan and the progressive countries has been lessened during the half century, but there is a difference still existing between them."

Three Hundred Thousand Autos Used in War

Germany Heads List of Belligerent Nationals With 100,000 of Them.

There are approximately 300,000 automobiles being used on both sides of the war, not including motor transports to be put in the field by the United States, according to a compilation just completed by the Japanese government, which has been investigating the matter. The principal belligerent nations have approximately 161,425 automobiles in use in the war, while the central powers are declared by the Japanese to be using 130,000 automobiles.

The automobiles in use by the belligerent powers are distributed as follows:

Britain 30,000, including 15,000 for the conveyance of supplies; France 80,000, including 25,000 for carrying supplies; Russia 40,000, including 20,000 for carrying supplies; Italy 10,000, including 5,000 for carrying supplies; Belgium 10,300; Roumania 1,700 and Serbia 125. The number of automobiles used for war service by the central powers are: Germany 100,000, including 25,000 for conveyance of supplies; Austria-Hungary 30,000, including 10,000 for carrying goods; Turkey 750, including 50 for conveying goods, and Bulgaria 300.

Prevention of Waste

The remarkable reduction of the garbage output in some cities since the food controller issued the call for economy in many things. One of these is the enormous normal waste of food in cities and towns. The city of Boston under the impetus of the "Saving Campaign" shows 50 tons less wastage for the month of June.

Poles Make Demands

According to a report from Cracow, Count Roniker of Warsaw, representing a group of prominent Russian Poles, has presented to the German government a set of demands. These include abolition of the frontier lines between the German and Austrian spheres of occupation in Russian Poland, cessation of requisitions in Poland, the expenditure of 6,500,000 marks to repair the ravages of war and the appointment of Count Maronifsky as head of the new administration of the occupied districts.

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati man tells how to dry up a corn or callus so it lifts off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need such no longer. Vaseline shoe cream, which you use before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted off, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone costs very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin. If your digit has a freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.

Officers Create Spirit of Antagonism

Brutal Arrogance and Worse of the Prussians.

James W. Gerard, the former American ambassador to Germany, in discussing the Zeppelin incident and the part it played in leading the German militarists to bring on war tells the following:

"For years officers of the army, both in the discharge of their duties and outside, have behaved in a very arrogant way toward the civil population. Time and again while I was in Germany waiting in line at some ticket office an officer shoved himself ahead of all others without even a protest from those waiting. On one occasion I went to the races in Berlin with my brother-in-law and bought a box. While we were out looking at the horses between the races a Prussian officer and his wife seated themselves in our box. I called the attention of one of the stewards to this, but the usher said that he did not dare ask a Prussian officer to leave, and it was only after sending him my Jockey Club badge and my pass as ambassador that I was able to secure possession of my own box."

Mr. Gerard further states that there have been many instances in Germany where officers, having a slight dispute with civilians, have instantly cut the civilian down. Instances of this kind and the harsh treatment of the Germans by officers and under-officers, while serving in the army, undoubtedly created in Germany a spirit of antagonism not only to the army itself, but to the whole military system of Prussia.

Mother Rita of Monastir

Predicting this world war, and besides that having predicted both the first and second Balkan wars and the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, the heir to the Austrian throne, should be conclusive indication of an ability to foretell the future accurately. With her past performances in mind, the latest prophecy of Mother Rita, of Monastir, the famous prophetess of the Balkans carries additional weight. She now predicts that Vienna will fall on the day King Peter, the aged monarch of Serbia, dies. Perhaps time will prove her right. Stranger things than that have happened.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Mrs. Delvina Pelletier, Ste. Perpetue, Que., writes: "I have much pleasure in stating that Baby's Own Tablets have been a marvelous medicine in the case of my baby. I have been using the Tablets for four years and don't think there is anything to equal them." In using the Tablets—the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that they do not contain one particle of opiate or other harmful drugs—they cannot possibly do harm—they always do good. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mose Had the Wrong Idea

A henroost was robbed one night, reports Case and Comment, and the owner found some finger prints in the dirt. He had one of these photographs and had the print enlarged. The finger print was traced to a neighborhood ne'er-do-well named Mose and after being accused Mose admitted his guilt. He looked at the enlarged photograph and said: "What Ah wants to know is: how did you get that photograph of me when corduroy pants I wore that night?"

Pain Flees Before It.—There is more virtue in a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil as a subduer of pain than in gallons of other medicine. The public knows this and there are few households throughout the country where it cannot be found. Thirty years of use has familiarized the people with it, and made it a household medicine throughout the western world.

Standardized Ships at Sea

The first of the British government's standardized merchant steamers to replace tonnage lost through submarines, it is announced, has been commissioned after completing most successful trials. The keel was laid down in February and the hull was launched in June.

It is understood that six different types of vessels, varying in size from 8,000 tons downward are being built in Great Britain. Many hundreds of such ships will be constructed.

Newest Foe Leader

Grandfather of Riga Conqueror Was An Officer in French Army

The capture by the Germans of Riga has brought out a new German army commander, von Hutier, whose recent promotion to leadership of an independent army, is one of the few examples of young blood forcing its way to the top through the serried ranks of old generals and superannuated officers.

Von Hutier, who is of French descent, his grandfather having been a French officer, was a division commander at the outbreak of the war and until the capture of Riga he had no striking events to his credit. His chief of staff, Gen. Slubersky, was for a time Field Marshal von Mackensen's chief of staff and later was transferred to Belgium, where his name gained undesirable prominence in connection with the execution of Edith Cavell, the British nurse.

Prince Eitel Friedrich, commander of the first guard division, which captured Tarnopol, participated in the operations at Riga.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires a cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. It is a constitutional remedy, it cures internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. One hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Catarrh Cure fails to cure. Women's Rights in China

China is the only Oriental country where the women are allowed to legislate. One of the provincial parliaments formed after the republic was established—that of Canton—elected ten seats to women, who are elected by the votes of their own sex. Two of the successful candidates are school mistresses, and most of the others are the wives of wealthy merchants.

"Since taking their seats the lady legislators have devoted themselves most diligently to their duties. They frequently take part in the debates and display considerable aptitude for parliamentary business. It is believed that the example set by Canton will in course of time be followed by some of the other provincial assemblies in China, which at present consist exclusively of men.

Your Asthma, Too. The efficacy of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy is not something that is merely to be hoped for; it is to be expected. It never fails to bring relief, and in your own individual case it will do the same. So universal has been the success of this far-famed cure that every one afflicted with this disease owes it to himself to try it.

A Simple Remedy

In these days of nervous prostration, called by some, "nervous prostration," because it is so prevalent among the idle rich, this story of the famous Dr. Abernethy, who did not believe in coddling his patients, is apropos.

"A patient, a wealthy woman, sent for him, and he found it was a case of nerves."

"Doctor," she said, "I feel a terrible pain in my side every time I put my hand to my head."
"Then, Madam," said the doctor, "why, in the name of common sense do you put your hand to your head?"

WHY IS IT

that chronic skin diseases which have defied all other treatments yield to Zam-Buk?

It is because Zam-Buk is germicidal, and also has such power of penetration that it reaches disease in the underlying tissues and cures from the "root" up. That is the only way a permanent cure can be effected.

Mr. H. C. Buckley of 461 E. Broadway, Portland, Oregon, says: "For chronic skin diseases there is nothing like Zam-Buk. For fifteen years I had eczema, and I tried an endless number of so-called 'eczema cures,' but nothing was capable of curing me permanently until I used Zam-Buk. Ten months' use of Zam-Buk has effected complete cure."

For ulcers, abscesses, boils, ringworm, blood-poisoning, piles, burns, scalds and cuts, Zam-Buk is equally good. All dealers sell Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

Lake TradeAt least 120 ships will leave the Great Lakes at the end of the present season of navigation never to return. The ships will be commandeered or purchased by the government for the Atlantic ocean service. The vessels so far selected for removal from the lakes total about 350,000 tons. Forty-three of the ships are small enough to pass the Welland canal without alteration. Seventy-seven must be cut in two to pass the locks. The tonnage now on the lakes totals about 2,700,000 tons.The appropriation for purchase of lake boats is included in the budget of $1,34,500,000 submitted to the secretary of the treasury by the shipping board. Of this amount about $140,000,000 is intended to pay for lake boats.The vessels will not be returned to the lakes, because officials believe that, allowing for new vessels for lake service which can be built during the war, 350,000 tons can be spared from the lake trade without seriously crippling the necessary trade.—From having 805 ships on the register, aggregating 280,073 tons. The revival of wooden shipbuilding, after all the old builders had passed away and all the old shipyards had been dismantled, marks an epoch of great importance in the history of the city. One firm has constructed within the last thirty years or more. Two other firms are arranging to build wooden ships immediately, with the exception of later on becoming steel ship plants.THE BUSINESS WOMANToday, more than ever before, is woman's opportunity. Many new occupations are now opened to her,

which, before the war, she was declared unfitted to do. And now she has risen to the opportunity and now shares many business responsibilities in former times confined to men. But, as women are subject to more frequent fluctuations of health than men, many will be handicapped early, if they regard their health requirements too lightly.The nervous strain, long hours and prolonged mental or physical fatigue thin the blood and weaken the nerves. Such conditions as women are now called upon to undergo can only be endured by a full-blooded constitution. This is as true for men as for women, only weaker women suffer sooner. "The woman worker, in any line, requires her blood replenished frequently. She needs new rich blood to keep her healthy under the trying conditions of business life, and to fortify her system against the effects of overwork. This applies also to the woman in the home, who, perhaps, has more worries and anxieties than usual. So let all girls and women take heed, renew their rich blood promptly at the first approach of pallor, lack of appetite, headache or backache. This can be best and most effectively accomplished by tak-gotten by GovernmentIn 1665, eight Dutch soldiers were sent by the Netherlands East India company to the little island of Kissa, sixteen miles off the most easterly point of Timor, according to J. Macmillan, Brown. A fort was built and they were told to watch the Portuguese. The company forgot about this lonely outpost, and Sergt. Kalfyn and his men realized that they were in fact marooned. They had their wives with them, a guiding principle of the Dutch East India company.

They set to work to build houses and cultivate the land.The descendants of these eight couples still remain. They have been wonderfully progressive in the two and a half centuries the sixteen have risen to three hundred, and they are a sturdy race with no signs of any evil effects from their marooning. They still keep their blood pure and still have big families and many have fair European faces and complexions and many children have light hair and blue eyes. These people had to work and work hard, and the consequence is that after 250 years in this tropical island despite intermarriage they are still prolific, and still keep their North European characteristics.Minard's Liniment Relieves Neural-

Germany's need of imports, food and war material from the neutrals is greater now than at any time in the last three years. For lack of cotton cloth, paper must be used to cover the dead in coffins, want of food causes riots and strikes, and all the church bells have gone to munition factories. The president's proclamation says to the world that Germany will receive no American food, cotton or war materials. We shall not help her to kill our soldiers.

cheerfulness—different in every way from the hectic flushes of optimism which have swept the country in past months. The people 'know' that they they know that ships are being built yards show that the tonnage for 1917 will be four times as great as in 1916,

NOW FIGHTING FOR NEW WORLD SAFER FOR THE COMMON PEOPLE

PEOPLE'S UNITY SIGNIFICANT SIGN OF THE TIMES

A New World is the Goal Towards Which the Allied Nations Are Marching When Democracy Decries That the Government Of a Nation Becomes the Sovereign Will of the People

To maintain the war spirit of the nation is as imperative a task as the maintenance of reinforcements and supplies at the front. In olden days wars were carried on by kings or governments through military commanders. The attitude of the nation at large was not a matter of supreme importance in the carrying on of a campaign. But times have changed. In democratic countries the whole nation, not the government only, goes to war. No longer is the military commander in the field to his own devices; no longer are ministers concerned only with the maintenance of an army in the field. The war spirit must be kept alive at home, to an extent undreamt of in Napoleonic times, is the base of military operations. In the days gone by, statesmen spoke to the nation through parliament. With the coming of democratic government ministers nowadays forsake the houses for the public platform. It is a sign of the times, and significant of the silent revolution which war is bringing in the train, that the minister of the United Kingdom takes advantage of every opportunity to associate the people with the government in bidding them support the military sciences. For Mr. Lloyd George knows that side by side with the physical struggle the fight is being waged for a new world made safer for the common people.

A new world. This is the goal towards which the Allied nations are marching. This new world is coming not from kings or governments or parliaments, but from the people who have been so long shut out of their heritage. When Mr. Lloyd George, in a recent speech, called on the British democracy to "get a new world" he had in mind the disappearing barrier which German military aggression has interposed between the British masses and the full consummation of their hopes. But the war has not been an unmitigated evil. It carries the reforming spirit of the British nation stages farther along the road of social and political redemption than were deemed possible in the declining days of the Asquith-Lloyd George government.

In that new world the parliament must take its place not as the machinery of a government or a party but as the sovereign will of the nation. Unthinking observers of the effects of the war upon parliament see in the breakdown of the representative chamber the inherent limitations of democracy as a governing force in time of peace. But the conclusion of Mr. Balfour, standing on the threshold of the new world that is rising from the ashes of the past, the product of the Allied nations re-echo Mr. Balfour's challenging words in the house at Ottawa: "We have staked our last dollar on democracy, and if democracy fails, we are bankrupt indeed."—Toronto Globe.

Spies in South America

German Agents Well Organized in Buenos Ayres for Enemy Work

Coming closely after Secretary of State Lansing's revelations of German-Swedish intrigue, the New York World publishes today a sensational article from its correspondent in Buenos Ayres, under date of August 18: "The unusual activities of German spies in this city during the recent visit of the United States squadron have led to the discovery of an espionage bureau which appears to be the headquarters for German activities in South America."

It was through an accident that the espionage activities were discovered. These were revealed through the opening of a letter which was wrongly delivered to a man of pro-Ally sentiments. On reading the letter he turned it over to the foreign office.

The president of the Argentine Republic immediately started searching inquiry with the result that it has been learned that the bureau is being financed from Germany and that it is housed in the elaborate residence of a German nobleman who is now living in a hotel.

A secret wireless outfit has been discovered in a house on United States street and was demolished.

It had been asserted for some time by allied representatives here that German espionage agents in Buenos Ayres have been in direct communication with Berlin by means of the Buenos Ayres cable to Spain, whence the information is sent by wireless from Madrid.

Appeals to Socialists for Help

Austrian Kaiser Takes Counsel With Old Enemy

It is a curious irony of fate that the present emperor of Austria, who is the son of the late Archduke Otto, should now be appealing to a Socialist to stand by him and help him in safeguarding his throne, especially when the emperor's father tried to put an end to that Socialist's life. And therefore hangs a tale.

The affair happened in 1895, and was the sequel to one of the most disgraceful of the many scandals with which the Austrian emperor's father, the late Archduke Otto, was connected. The story is well known. Riding one day in the country, Archduke Otto met the funeral procession of a poor peasant, whose relatives and friends were following his body to the grave. Archduke Otto, who was accompanied by several officers, compelled the bearers to put down the coffin in the centre of the road, in order that he might have the pleasure of jumping over it on his horse. This he did several times, backwards and forwards, whilst the onlookers looked on indignant and helpless. Archduke Otto and his friends then continued their ride.

Herr Pernsterfer, who at that time was the only Socialist member of the Austrian chamber of deputies, brought the scandal to light in parliament, and denounced Archduke Otto from the rostrum of the chamber as a blackguard. His courageous attack on one of the most prominent members of the imperial family caused a tremendous sensation.

The next day Pernsterfer was found in his flat lying on the floor nearly dead. His servant had been discovered out of his house, and during his absence one or more unknown persons had got into the flat and beaten Pernsterfer to the point of death. When the servant came back he found the Socialist deputy lying in a pool of blood, and for many weeks afterwards he lay helpless as a result of the brutal assault.

Police investigations were made, but they were speedily terminated, because it was found that Archduke Otto had been the perpetrator of the outrage. It was also discovered that the late Archduke Francis Ferdinand, although he had taken no part in the coffin incident, nevertheless resented the public attack on an imperial archduke so keenly that he aided and abetted his brother in the assault on Pernsterfer.

It is one of the curious ironies of fate that Archduke Otto's son should now be appealing to Pernsterfer to stand by the imperial family and help him in safeguarding his throne.

West Will Get Apples From East

Price Has Been Fixed To Allow Wholesale and Retail Profit

According to Hon. W. J. Hanna, food controller, Western Canada will obtain its apple supply from Nova Scotia. He stated that the British Columbia crop was 75 per cent. normal. Ontario and Quebec have only 15 per cent. of a normal crop, but Nova Scotia has 100 per cent. normal. The latter province usually exports a large quantity of apples, but this year the crop from the east will be diverted to the west and the food controller's department has already made arrangements for the distribution of the crop in carload lots to the west. The price has also been fixed, and the wholesalers and retailers will help in its distribution on the basis of the fixed price.

Another point made by Mr. Hanna was that it would be a great mistake for Canada to change the standard of its flour. He said that for the present there would be a slight gain if the standard of flour was lowered, but this would be much more than offset by the loss that would accrue in export trade after the war.

Canadian Pig Iron Production

With three small plants still unheard from, the total production in Canada during the first three months of 1917 was 276,777 tons, an average of 92,259 tons per month as compared with a monthly production of 97,438 tons during 1916.—Journal of Commerce.

FUTURE OF AIR POWER MILITANT AND ITS RELATION TO THE WAR

GERMAN RAIDS HAVE DRIVEN HOME A LESSON

Absolute Supremacy of the Air Would Enable the Allies to Carry The War Into German Territory In Such a Way As To Secure Absolute Military Results and to Wear Down Resistance

Want To Be Like England

One City in Germany the Kaiser Dare Not Visit

The people of Hamburg, long proud of the distinction of being the only "free city" in Germany, are so sick of the war, so eager to hear the proclamation "peace," that, as one notable citizen said, "Give us food and we'll hang our heads." The harbor is dead.

An Englishwoman who lived in Hamburg for many years, and has just made her way to England, gave this vivid description of the condition of things there: "No place in Germany has been hit so hard by the war as Hamburg. No community sighs so anxiously for peace. There is no more talk of 'victory.'"

To the thousands of people who knew Hamburg in its gay, prosperous, well-fed days the Alster city would present a sad and sorry sight today. There is no sign whatever of its former prosperity. The harbor is dead. The vast business of export and shipping on which thousands of Hamburg families depended is at a standstill. They have had to make heavy drafts on savings and invested capital. The two great hotels, once the city's pride, the Esplanade and the Atlantic, are practically shut and bankrupt; they depend on the patronage of wealthy visitors, especially, Americans and English. Cafe life ceased many months ago. You can get no coffee that is drinkable—the so-called "substitutes" are vile and there has been no tea for a long time.

The Hamburg goose was a once-famed national dish. A goose, when it can be had, now costs $25 or $30; it takes a day's labor to cost $2.50 to $3.50. There is no lack of money, but money is worthless because only in rare instances can one buy anything with it. There were never so few fat men and women in Germany. "Pot-bellies," have disappeared. Everybody in Hamburg is looking worn and careworn.

Hamburg depended, to an enormous extent, on English trade and good will for its prosperity; and though the Hamburgers first protested that Gott would strafe England, they are beginning now to think of the future. They hope England will forgive and forget, and help the port to regain some of its greatness.

You will hear a good many Hamburgers say they know now that it was not England who made the war. They are beginning to blame "Berlin." The Kaiser is not nearly so popular on the Elbe as he once was. He does not think there would be much cheering for him today if he rode round the Alster with his friend, Herr Ballin. Hamburg soldiers are very bitter when they come home. You hear a good deal of talk, attributed to them, about "freeing" Hamburg from the rest of Germany when the war is over. They want to be "like England."

Hardware

Many important price changes have been made in Western Canada. The changes are particularly numerous. Light and heavy tee strap hinges have moved to higher levels. Wrought hammers, machinists hammers, coil chain, black sheets, vices, grinders, steel and wood tackle bolts and hack saw blades are among the lines that have been advanced in price. Window glass has advanced by changing discounts. Linseed oil is inclined to a lower price. Business in hardware lines is keeping up well. Journal of Commerce.

Requisitions Horse and Mule Hides

The English army council has taken possession of all horse and mule hides as in stock July 4, and further dealings are prohibited without a license.—Journal of Commerce.

The German raids on London have driven home one lesson about the use of air power. A bare superiority means that the war in the air continues to be fought over our own territory or that of our Allies. To carry the war into German territory in such a way as to secure definite military results, such a supremacy is needed as will prevent German airmen from ever rising. Such a supremacy, if we could hold it for three months, would gain us victory in the war. We could bomb Krupp so persistently that no work would be possible there. We could destroy the Rhine bridges, so that no supplies, even if they could be manufactured, could reach the German army. The effect would be to double and treble the relative strength of the allied armies to the German. Had the truth of this view been seen twelve months ago, we might at this time have been in a winning position and that at a much smaller expenditure of life and at a much smaller cost to the industry and finance of the country.

The truth was not seen a year ago because admirable as is the work done by the Royal Flying Corps and by the Royal Naval Air service, both war office and admiralty were too busy in defending their own prerogative over the air to take a broad and long view of all the changes that this new arm would make in the art of war. The Germans, too, were nearly as slow to see them, though they have taken a lead, it is only a slight one and the prospects of our catching up to them are very good. Already views about the future of air power which would have seemed wild only two months ago, though they are put forward even then, are now the commonplace for discussion upon the war. It is not the least of our debt to America that they carry over foresight in preparing a huge air fleet has enabled us to look forward with confidence to attaining the superiority required—not this year, alas, but next year. And it is not the least of the services of Germany to our war policy that by aiding London they have at last knocked the truth into the heads of H. Sidebottom in the New Republic.

Paris Has War Museum

Collections Fill Twenty-Two Large Rooms

Paris now boasts a museum unlike any other in the world. This is the "Museum du Guerre," the war museum of M. Henri Leblanc, and contains the most complete collection of documents relating to the war constituted anywhere.

The idea of forming a war collection first occurred to M. Leblanc on the last day of July, 1914, before hostilities actually broke out. He began with gathering all the public posters concerning war measures posted in Paris. Today his collections fill 22 rooms. Every aspect of the war is here represented in documents and pictures. Posters showing the development of American sentiment till the final intervention, have a prominent place. Every form of paper money issued in France and the colonies is represented. There are also countless specimens of "trench-craft" and war souvenirs.

He has presented the collection to the State.

These Men Will Help You Decide

Are you liable to be selected for service under the Military Service Act?

The answer to this question is being made readily available for you.
Remember that the first class to be called includes only men between the ages of 20 and 34, both inclusive, who are unmarried or widowers without children, those married after July 6, 1917, being deemed single for the purposes of the Act.

Medical Boards are now being established throughout Canada. These Boards will examine, free of charge and obligation, all men who wish to be examined as to their physical fitness for military service. They will tell you in a very short time whether your physical condition absolves you from the call or makes you liable for selection.

It is important that you obtain this information as soon as possible.
A certificate of unfitness from a Medical Board will secure for you freedom from responsibility under the Military Service Act from any Exemption Tribunal. A certificate of fitness will not preclude an appeal for exemption on any ground.

In order that you may be able to plan your future with certainty, visit a Medical Board as soon as possible and find out if you are liable to be selected.
Your family and your employer are interested as well as yourself.
